

George Ryga's HUNGRY HILLS

The award-winning novel HUNGRY HILLS by legendary Canadian author George Ryga has been adapted for the screen by Vancouver-based screenwriter Gary Fisher and began principal photography in and around Regina, Saskatchewan on April 27, 2009 under the helm of director Rob King.

The rolling hills of Saskatchewan's Qu'Appelle Valley provided the setting for Ryga's story of a young man's desperate attempts to overcome poverty and discrimination.

Ryga's timeless story of perseverance and redemption has been a sixteen-year journey for screenwriter Gary Fisher, a dream shared by award-winning director Rob King (Moccasin Flats: Redemption, Something More) who has championed the project alongside Fisher for the last decade.

George Ryga's HUNGRY HILLS stars Keir Gilchrist (United States of Tara), Alexander De Jordy (Sticks and Stones, True Heroes), John Pyper-Ferguson (Brothers & Sisters, Everest), Gabrielle Rose (Grace, Mothers & Daughters), Alexia Fast (Kaya, Left Coast) and Cavan Cunningham (Just Friends, Corner Gas).

Rhonda Baker (Dolan's Cadillac, Ticket Out, The Messengers), Avi Federgreen (One Week; Leslie, My Name is Evil), Rob King and Gary Fisher produced the feature-length film.

Jennifer Jonas (Leslie, My Name Is Evil, All Hat) and Leonard Farlinger (Monkey Warfare, The Perfect Son) of New Real Films, and Gerard Demaer of Gerard Productions Inc. served as executive producers.

SYNOPSIS

In 1954 after two years in a home for boys, Snit Mandolin (Keir Gilchrist), 15, returns home to his seemingly unhinged and reclusive aunt Matilda (Gabrielle Rose). Defeated by a community that still shuns him, confronted by the impossibility of surviving on his aunt's farm, Snit falls in with Johnny Swift (Alexander De Jordy), 16, another outcast.

Johnny makes moonshine and sells it through a local bootlegger. The boys work together and become fast friends. And Snit finds first love with a free-spirited local girl, Robin, 16 (Alexia Fast).

Their adventure is interrupted by the enigmatic and unpredictable Roy Kane (John Pyper-Ferguson), the district's private cop, who took Snit away two years ago and will now use the boys to get to the bootlegger.

Dogged by Kane, betrayed by a bootlegger and plagued by the ghosts of the past, the boys' partnership ends – their friendship broken.

Alone once more in the community that rejected him, Snit comes to a violent crossroads.

ABOUT GEORGE RYGA

Born in Deep Creek, a remote Ukrainian community in the Athabasca region of northern Alberta, George Ryga is a founding father of Canadian literature, theatre and culture. The harsh realities of his upbringing – an unforgiving landscape, poverty, and isolation – are recurring themes in his work.

Largely self-taught, he published his first book of poetry in his late teens and garnered accolades in 1967 with the premiere of a play that is perhaps his most famous work, The Ecstasy of Rita Joe.

Throughout his career, Ryga criticized social issues in Canada through an austere examination of his characters, becoming an outspoken champion for the underprivileged.

Known for his stark rural settings and a recognizable array of colourful, characters, all of whom take us in many pleasurable, disturbing and revealing directions, Ryga offers readers characters with opportunities for redemption, survival and self-determination.

“All of Ryga’s plays and novels were propelled by compassion and moral outrage,” noted the Globe & Mail, “but also by a peculiar and personal awareness of the life and death of human cultures and the values they contain.”

One of his early novels, HUNGRY HILLS examines the role of the disaffected in the mainstream consciousness of Canadian society by dramatizing the effects of isolation and the condition and psychology of stigmatized individuals in the face of societal neglect.

In enduring the prejudice and isolation his community has imposed upon him, and by insisting on his right to inclusion within that society, Snit Mandolin speaks for everyone who has suffered injustice at the hands of society-at-large. His journey is one of heart-breaking discovery and the heroics of simple survival that mirror the life of the author himself.

Though unapologetically Canadian in their location and circumstance, the central themes in Ryga’s work address the general human condition and speak to audiences around the world.

“George Ryga has taken the human experience, which in this case is only Canadian by accident of destiny, distilled it through his fine sense of compassion and given it to us...as an act of communion in which our own participation is inescapable,” said Ben Metcalfe of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

George Ryga died in 1985 in Summerland, British Columbia. In 1996 the George Ryga Centre Society was established in Ryga’s former home in Summerland, where it functions as a cultural centre in memory of the author’s contribution to Canadian culture.

The centre has hosted writers such as Sandra Birdsell (The Ruslander, The Two-Headed Calf) and supports the annual George Ryga Award for Societal Awareness in Literature, granted to a writer who has achieved an outstanding degree of social awareness in a new book publication.

George Ryga is remembered as one of Canada’s most prolific and powerful writers. His relevance to this day is confirmed by the fact that The Ecstasy of Rita Joe was running at the National Arts Centre in Ottawa while the feature film adaptation of his novel Hungry Hills was in production in Regina, SK.

The novel is currently collected in the volume George Ryga: The Prairie Novels (Talonbooks)

ABOUT HUNGRY HILLS - THE FILM

It is no surprise that screenwriter Gary Fisher saw the potential for an adaptation of the short novel as his third screenplay. He began passionately pursuing the possibility of making a feature length film of HUNGRY HILLS more than 16 years ago and eventually took the script to Saskatchewan and director Rob King.

Their perseverance resulted in a partnership between the pair and producer Rhonda Baker. When Avi Federgreen met the director and read the script he immediately recognized its potential and was brought into the fold. Shortly thereafter executive producers Jennifer Jonas and Leonard Farlinger, and finally the indispensable Gerard Demaer, were brought on board to complete the team.

Their labour of love saw production of the feature-length film begin in Saskatchewan in April 2009 with Rob King at the creative helm. Not unlike the adversity faced by the characters in the story, the cast and crew braved inclement prairie weather and the inevitable budgetary constraints encountered in filming, with the end results exceeding not only viewer expectations but the expectations of the creators themselves.

THE RED CAMERA

In an effort to stretch the budget as far as possible, the film was shot without the use of celluloid film. The majority of the film is shot on exterior sets, that are stylistically crucial to the storyline. The RED camera allowed the director and cinematographer to define detail in the progressing physical darkness of the film dictated by the script.

The unconventional RED camera is a relatively new technology, first introduced four years ago by Oakley founder Jim Jannard and is taking the film and television industry by storm.

HUNGRY HILLS is one of only a handful of feature films to be shot in Canada exclusively employing RED technology, which means no actual film was used in the process. The RED camera captures images that are transferred to hard-drive on set, thereby increasing production value and simplifying the post-production process.

“For me, this is Year Zero; I feel like I should call up Film on the phone and say, ‘I’ve met someone,’” commented famed cinematographer/director Stephen Soderbergh (Traffic, Ocean’s Eleven) at red.com.

Though as a digital imaging device the RED records on a different media, it operates like a traditional film camera allowing the cinematographer the speed, mobility and agility to capture and define the story through the lens.

Cinematographer Ken Krawczyk (who incidentally worked on the first feature film to use the RED camera exclusively) consulted with director Rob King before they decided to employ the new technology exclusively in the making of the film.

THE CAST

Casting was another primary challenge when shooting an ambitious character-driven feature film with limited financial resources. Award-winning casting directors John Buchan, Jason Knight, and Carmen Kotyk, aligned their talents to assemble an unparalleled cast of industry veterans and newcomers who were compelled by the potential of Gary Fisher’s script and Rob King’s vision for the film.

Cast in the lead role of Snit Mandolin, KEIR GILCHRIST was born in London, England and moved with his family to Boston and then New York before settling in Toronto, which he currently calls home. He has taken drama classes since he was very young and it was with the encouragement of a Toronto drama teacher, who arranged a meeting with her agent, that he first began acting professionally.

He currently stars in the critically acclaimed Showtime series United States of Tara (Toni Collette, John Corbett) from executive producer Steven Spielberg and creator Diablo Cody (Juno).

Keir starred in the Fox Television series The Winner opposite Rob Corddry and has made many memorable guest appearances on shows including The Family Guy and The Listener. He can also be seen in the title role of Peck in the feature film Just Peck. His other film credits include The Egg Factory and Dead Silence.

Keir and his classmate ALEXANDER DE JORDY auditioned for HUNGRY HILLS together in Toronto, – an opportunity that prompted them to produce a comedic short documentary of their experiences for a school project. The documentary had a Hollywood ending when Alex was cast alongside Keir in the role of Johnny Swift.

Born and raised in Toronto, Alexander caught the acting bug in grade school while attending Royal St. George's College where he played the Pauper in the school's 2003 production of the Prince and the Pauper. He was also a ranked competitive junior tennis player over a six-year period (2001 – 2006) competing provincially by age nine and nationally by age eleven.

In 2006, Alexander developed a temporary knee condition requiring him to take a break from high-level tennis competition. This turned out to be a great opportunity for him to focus on his acting career and venture into the world of film and television.

Alex has appeared in True Heroes (Discovery Channel) and The Good Witch (Hallmark) but he is best known for the lead role he played in the 2008 Gemini Award-nominated CTV series Sticks and Stones, winner of Best Foreign Drama Feature at the 2008 International Family Film Festival in Los Angeles.

Today at 16, Alexander is totally committed to an acting career but still hits the gym and tennis courts and has most recently become a yoga enthusiast.

Veteran actor JOHN PYPER-FERGUSON was cast opposite Keir and Alex as the community-paid private policeman Roy Kane.

Born in Australia, Pyper, as his friends call him, lived there only a short time before moving to Canada where he was raised.

Pyper has worked extensively in theatre, film and on television. He has appeared in more than 36 films, most recently in Dominic Laurence James production Die. His credits include Brett Ratner's X-Men 3, Andy Fickman's film She's The Man, Bird on a Wire starring Goldie Hawn and Mel Gibson, Clint Eastwood's The Unforgiven, Frank and Jessie starring Bill Paxton, Somebody is Waiting starring Gabriel Byrne and Nastassja Kinski, For Richer or Poorer alongside Tim Allen and Kirstie Alley, Adrienne Shelley's I'll Take You There and in Bruce MacDonald's cult hit Hard Core Logo.

Pyper's most recent television work was on Flashpoint. He has guest starred on The L Word, Battlestar Galactica, Cold Cast, Fear Itself, The Handler, Family Law, Judging Amy, The Guardian, ER, Gideon's Crossing and CSI. He has also appeared in Chris Carter's X-Files, Harsh Realm and Millennium. Other credits include Arli$$, Outer Limits, Walker: Texas Ranger, Star Trek: The Next Generation, Nash Bridges, MacGyver and 21 Jump Street.

He was nominated for a Gemini Award for his work on the series The Highlander.

Pyper starred in the mini-series The Tempest opposite Peter Fonda and was the Warlord in the MOW The Warlord. Never one to shy away from a challenge Pyper climbed mountains in the television movie Everest and road horses and chuck wagons in the mini-series Into the West.

He has been a series regular in Brothers and Sisters and the popular Briscoe County, and had recurring roles in the series' Cane, Night Stalker, Killer Instinct and Jeremiah.

Pyper graduated with distinction from the University of Alberta with a bachelor of fine arts in performance. He loves to sing and play the guitar.

GABRIELLE ROSE plays Snit's tormented aunt Matilda Mandolin.

An acclaimed and award-winning Canadian actor, Gabrielle is currently starring in a lead role in the comedic drama Mothers and Daughters which opened to enthusiastic theatre audiences in May 2009.

Gabrielle also played a lead role in the genre feature Grace - a disturbing, psychological horror film directed by Paul Solet. Grace is enjoying success on the film festival circuit and will open theatrically in later 2009. Gabrielle attended the premiere of the film at Sundance, where it and she received excellent reviews – and it is rumoured that two grown men passed out in the audience (by all accounts a first for the festival). The film recently won the Jury Prize at the Gerardmer Festival du Fantastique in France.

Gabrielle's career accomplishments were recently honoured with an induction into the BC Entertainment Hall of Fame. In honour of British Columbians who have excelled in their chosen entertainment field throughout BC, across Canada and internationally, Gabrielle's plaque will be permanently mounted in the Starwalk on the Granville Street sidewalks of Theatre Row later this year.

Her critically acclaimed work includes an extensive list of credits in film, television and theatre. Her impressive list of film credits include: The Sweet Hereafter, The Rhino Brothers, The Adjuster, Speaking Parts, Family Viewing, The Five Senses, Sisters, and the recently wrapped feature film Excited directed by Bruce Sweeney.

On television, her credits include series recurring roles in Robson Arms, Three Moons Over Milford, Jake and the Kid and Exes and Ohs and has starred in Taken, Battlestar Galactica, Sanctuary, Tom Stone, Win Again, Milgaard, The Sleep Room, X-Files, Beggars and Choosers, Shattered and many more. Gabrielle received a Leo Award for her role in The Mob Princess and won a 2009 Leo Award for Best Guest Performance by a Female in a Dramatic Series for her role in Sanctuary.

Gabrielle has served on the board of Vancouver Women in Film and conducted several workshops there with Peg Campbell, one of which was developed by Carol Whiteman into the highly successful Women in the Director's chair. She is passionately committed to Canadian film, television and theatre.

ALEXIA FAST rounds out the teenaged cast in the role of Robin, Snit's confidante and love-interest.

At age 7, Alexia penned her first professional format script in purple ink. Her efforts garnered the attention of the local digital filmmaking society who workshopped her script before providing her equipment so she could complete the project. She designed storyboards for her shots, directed the camera operator and assembled make-up and wardrobe before engaging an editor to deliver the final product. The Red Bridge has screened at the 2002 Atlantic Film Festival and in 2007 at the Reel to Reel Festival in Vancouver.

By age 12 she had segued into acting with credits such as Fido (Carrie Anne Moss, Billy Connelly), Supernatural, 4400 and Past Tense for which she received the 2007 Leo Award for best female lead actor in a feature film.

Alexia danced her way to a co-starring role in the feature film Kickin' It Old Skool and grew her resume with roles in Wildfires, Masters of Science Fiction, I Scream..We All Scream for Ice Scream, Tin Man, Sara Paxton, Kaya, Helen, Gym Teacher, Triple Dog and The Cult.

She was cast as lead in a CBC series pilot Left Coast.

Travelling to Los Angeles in May 2009 for the annual YOUNG HOLLYWOOD issue of Nylon Magazine was a particular thrill for the young actor.

CAVAN CUNNINGHAM rounds out the lead cast in the role of Whittles, the meddling local shopkeeper – a noted departure from his most recognizable role as Fitzzy, the befuddled mayor of Dog River on the CTV series Corner Gas.

Cavan was born in California and now resides in Regina, Saskatchewan with time also spent in Bolivia, the Queen Charlotte Islands of the Pacific Northwest and Vancouver. His more than twenty years of success includes theatre, film and television. His theater performances include the mainstages of the Persephone Theatre (Saskatoon), The Globe (Regina), Theatre Northwest (Prince George) and several smaller companies throughout Western Canada.

His film and television credits are many in both national and international productions including X-Files, Wiseguy, The Englishman's Boy, Prairie Giant: The Tommy Douglas Story, Just Friends, Little Mosque on the Prairie and most notably a recurring role as Mayor Fitzzy for six seasons on the hit television series Corner Gas.

Cavan co-wrote and starred in the independent feature film BarNone and continues to pursue other projects including a masters degree in English and furniture making. His most heartfelt role is husband to his wife Kathryn and father to their children Lina and Jian.
